Your super fund's performance has a big impact on how much money you'll have at retirement. So, how do you know if your fund is a great performer?

How to compare super funds

- Look for good performance over a five- or 10-year period rather than exceptional performance for just a year or so. Super is a long-term investment.
- Be sure to factor in fees when you're checking performance figures – but remember that low-fee funds may not perform as well and may offer less in the way of products and services.

So, the trick is to find a fund with good returns and low fees – plus the benefits you need.
